There are hundreds, if not thousands of children in Massachusetts that dream about one day running out of the Patriots tunnel while Edray Qubein’s Crazy Train plays on the loudspeakers. After all, Tom Brady and Bill Belichick have made this franchise into the league’s best and have created fans on a yearly basis since 2000. Well, the team recently made this fantasy come true for 200 children, and they did so while adding an even bigger surprise.

As a video released on Twitter by ESPN’s Mike Reiss shows, the Patriots brought 200 kids to Gillette Stadium and let them run out of the inflatable helmet and onto the field while Crazy Train played. However, that was only the first part of the surprise.

What awaited them on the field were brand new beds, complete with Patriots-branded comforters, pillows, and sheets.

According to Reiss, The New England Patriots Charitable Foundation and Bob’s Discount Furniture had partnered for “A Bed for Every Child.” This initiative was created by the Massachusetts Coalition for the Homeless with the purpose of helping children in local public schools get a better night’s sleep.

As the organization’s website states (http://www.masoef.org/index.php/a-bed-for-every-child-initiative): “In 2011, our advocates learned that many students in local public schools were not getting a good night’s sleep because they did not have their own bed to sleep in at night. The Coalition took action and launched A Bed for Every Child.

Through the New England Patriots Charitable Foundation, families that are on the brink of homelessness will now have a bed for their children. A good night’s sleep is critical to success in the classroom, and the team wants to provide just that as the new school year begins. Having a custom bedspread is just an added bonus for the children.
